Berry crops are struggling, bear conflicts on the rise

As the dog days of summer wear on across Montana, another reality is becoming clear – the berry crop bears depend on for food in the late summer and fall isn't what it should be.

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks specialists around the state are seeing similar behavior – bears that should be foraging for berries in the mountains are getting into trouble around homes and communities looking for something to eat.

Jamie Jonkel is FWP's long-time bear conflict specialist in the Missoula area. He's experienced this cycle of behavior time and again when natural food sources aren't available.

The way to avoid bear conflicts around your home is relatively simple – keep all bear attractants secured and out of the reach of bears.

Hungry bears – both black bears and grizzlies – can be attracted to a variety of things around homes. Garbage cans can be an easy target. Other easy meals are bird feeders or pet food left outside.

The reality is that securing attractants is both a personal responsibility and a neighborhood and community obligation.

If anyone is experiencing a bear-related concern, they should contact FWP as soon as possible.

will be closed until further notice. A Temporary Flight Restriction (TFR) is in place over both fire areas.

On the Bobcat Lakes Fire, Red flag conditions created extreme fire behavior yesterday. Active fire growth with west to northwest winds continue, an infrared flight mapped the fire at 1,561 acres. Fire behavior remains active to the north and east into Lambrecht Creek, with spotting, running, torching, crowning and short-range spotting. One UAS module is on order to help with mapping of fire perimeters. Structure protection work will continue around Jerked Prairie and crews will work to find any unchecked fire edges. Firefighters structure assessments and preparation are ongoing along Pettengill Road.

On the Sand Creek Fire, yesterday's reconnaissance flight estimated the fire at 1,000 acres. Yesterday, active fire growth progressed south due to north winds. The fire had minimal activity on the north edge, as the fire ran into the west flank of the 2011 Stewart Fire. Fire personnel continue scouting for containment opportunities and control features off of Steel Fox Road (FSR #2420). Heavy equipment and additional resources are on order. Structure protection development plans continue towards Odell Repeater. North of the fire, the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest is closing (FSR 2433), the two-track road up to Stewart Meadows until further notice.

Building

We opened our Walk Up Window this month! We're incredibly grateful to everyone who has helped us get this far. The state approval for opening came on July 2 and we had the sign lit up on July 3.

In other building improvements, our large signs are hung – locals, check out the downtown-facing one at night to see the lights on. Soon, there will also be a new hanging sign on N. Idaho St.

Derek's focus is now on the production space. He'll finish the walls, install the boiler (and also earn his Boiler Operator License), and place all the equipment where it goes. When this part of the project is completed, we'll be able to both produce spirits and open the Small Tasting Room to the public. Until then, we'll sell our non-alcoholic drinks out of the Walk Up Window.

Business / Community

It's been a whirlwind of a month. We've graduated from Business 101 to the real-world: projecting sales with actual numbers under our belts, comparing pricing across distributors, buying ingredients in bulk (Katrina cleared both Town & Country and Safeway out of their 46oz cans of tomato juice for a large order of Bloody Mary Mix), learning how the point of sale system works with customers in front of us, and finding the best way to describe our products here, there, online, and in person. Our most common question is 'what is a shrub?' followed by 'what spirits will you make?' and 'when will they be ready?'. We've loved the conversations and look forward to more.

For the beginning of August, we'll keep our hours at Thursday 12-6, Friday 12-6, and Saturday 10-3. We might expand as the Western students return to town mid-month. Updates will be on our website, social media, and Google Maps.

Distillery

With slushies, ginger beer, and shrubs at the walk up window, we've been enjoying a lot of delicious drinks this month. Katrina's current favorite cocktail (especially in this heat) is a Strawberry Jalapeño shrub 1:1 with tequila, a dash of orange bitters, and garnished with a lime wedge. Derek prefers some tequila in an Orange Dreamsicle slushie.

Secretary Christi Jacobsen celebrates record-breaking Montana business momentum

Montana's Main Streets, downtowns, and small business communities had reason to celebrate in July as the Secretary of State's Office recorded more than 8,000 business applications — a new monthly high and an increase from 6,789 applications submitted in July of last year. The record reflects the steady momentum of Montana entrepreneurs, family-owned businesses, and growing companies investing in communities across the state.

"Every application represents a Montana dream taking shape," Secretary of State Christi Jacobsen said. "From first-time entrepreneurs to established businesses expanding their footprint, this record month speaks to the grit, creativity, and confidence that define Montana's business community."

The July milestone adds to a broader story of business growth in Montana. In recent years, the state has continued to draw national attention for its startup climate. WalletHub ranked Montana the 12th best state in America to start a business in 2026, and Entrepreneur Media previously named Montana the best state in the nation for business startups.

The Secretary of State's Business Services Division helps process business filings and supports entrepreneurs as they take the next step in building their businesses in Montana. More information about starting or registering a business is available at sosmt.gov/business.
